They retreated and kept up skirmishing in the woods, being steadily driven by our forces, unti-they reached Big Mulberry creek, about twenty-sever south of Monticello, where they made a stand and attacked the First brigade of the Second division, com ed by Colonel Miller. They had four pieces of ary in position, and kept up a murderous musketry Twenty-seventh Indiana, under Captain Tyler, ged them with sabres, and drove them in every road to the left, came up, and the victory was com About one bundred rebels were killed and exptured three pieces of artillery and over two hun tred prisoners. The rebels were under Generals Forrest rs, Roddy and Lyon, General Forrest command ing in person. This battle took place on Saturday, the inst., and that night the Second and Fourth division ed within twenty miles of Selma Captain Tyler, of the Twenty-seventh Indiana, who led the sabre charge s killed after he had surrendered.

THE BATTLE OF SELMA. or the battle of Mulberry creek Forrest retreated ma, and with his entire army, numbering about sever usand, pressed about two thousand citizen militia, and prepared to defend the place.

Our forces marched to Seima in two columns, the First ion taking a road leading to the centre of the works, and the Fourth division taking the main road leading to the left. On arriving at the brow of the hill the rebels were found to be drawn up in line of battle in front of the orks, and General Long commenced forming his men. se Second brigade was formed on the right and the on the left of the centre, while the Fourth division as coming up on the extreme left and forming.
